

The influence of the delivery size on the quality of marketed milk in the Podkarpacie Province

Summary

The aim of study was estimated the influence of the delivery size on the milk quality in the Podkarpacie Province in 2005. The research considered: size of annual production, sectors of production (the individual, public) and the administration division (8 districts of Podkarpackie Province). It was demonstrated that the greatest quantities of the raw milk derived from private dairy farms. The milk of the best quality was found in the deliveries from the Bieszczady District, public sectors and the private dairy farms (group with the highest annual quantities of the produced milk).